Greetings and welcome to the Counihan Gallery in Brunswick, a bona fide cultural institution and beacon for the visual arts in the City of Moreland. This year marks the beginning of a new chapter and an important development in the history of our beloved gallery which first opened in 1999, named in recognition of one of Australia’s foremost artists, as well as a formidable political activist, Noel Counihan (1913–1986).

In 2020, the Counihan Gallery will open the doors to its new exhibition space, expanding from its original site and reaching forward to a welcome window frontage on bustling Sydney Road.

The expansion increases the gallery’s overall exhibition space by well over 50 per cent and gives some welcome visibility as to its location and the artistic riches that lie waiting within.

We have another strong exhibition program in store for you and February’s f_OCUS showcases works by women from the Moreland Art Collection and includes brand-new acquisitions. In May, the gallery co-presents Making Marks: Australia to Afghanistan with the Human Rights Arts and Film Festival, a long-distance collaboration between Australian artists and students from a women’s collective in Kabul. We also have many local artists included in other exhibitions such as Histrionic and Object Lessons, which is always a source of great pride for us in Moreland as such a creative community.

There are many more topical and strident exhibitions ahead, which the Counihan Gallery has become well known for, as well as engaging public programs, floor talks, forums and workshops for our visitors to take their gallery experience to another level. As always, exhibitions and other programs at the Counihan Gallery are free and I encourage you to attend these as they really do enhance your understanding and appreciation of the arts, give you the chance to connect with others and to discover something new, which can be life changing.

Everyone is welcome at the Counihan Gallery, so on behalf of Council I invite you to immerse yourself in the Arts and Culture of Moreland and hope I will see you in the months ahead when you visit the gallery in 2020!

Histrionic addresses the hyper-connectivity that defines the Post-Internet era. Its various effects are the subject of three visual artists concerned with the way identity is compromised or confused in online culture.

Tyler Payne’s feminist perspective exposes social media’s perpetuation of body dysmorphia. Using the device of the iPad as both a tool and a formal mode of display, Payne considers the user’s vantage point in an enquiry into identity, online. Marion Abraham trawls the internet for contemporary bodies in formations and poses that reference historical portrayals of the human condition; pornography, nudist colonial life and sport reflect the arbitrary way in which the internet arranges data and mutates identity. Saffron Newey considers the historical image and how it is displaced online. Following investigations into links between the ‘Romantic’ and ‘digital’ sublime, Newey’s paintings are ‘sampled’ and removed from their historical origin and time.

SCREEN TIME

It is unsettling to think that while we watch screens, they quietly watch back at us. Our interactions feed data to hungry tech giants, whose targeted advertising and helpful suggestions seem harmless enough. However, public spaces are also increasingly encroached upon, including security cameras using advanced algorithms with the intent of maintaining public order. We are often passive to this, ignoring the consequences for technology’s immediate convenience.

Bowes brings our 21st century to-and-fro with screens to the surface, reflecting the viewer back at them in various ways as his installations watch them within the gallery space. Disjointed and disfigured, recognisable but not representational – their mirrored surface creates a caricature of the viewer that can be equal parts captivating and disturbing.

FOCUS

This year we launch the exciting new street front art space at the Counihan Gallery In Brunswick, which will be used to display longer cycled projects, invitational curations, touring exhibitions and, importantly, regular displays of works from the Moreland Art Collection.

Therefore, to coincide with the lead up and celebration of International Women’s Day, the Counihan Gallery will present fOCUS, a selection of works by women from the permanent collection including key works, recent and brand-new acquisitions. Comprising photography, painting, printmaking, artist books and animation, fOCUS also represents a range of social, political and cultural concerns and provocations, a mainstay that the Counihan Gallery pioneered and has become renowned for amongst municipal galleries and remains a feature of its annual programs and art collection.

MAKING MARKS: AUSTRALIA TO AFGHANISTAN

Making Marks: Australia to Afghanistan, led by artist Gali Weiss, is a participatory art exchange between 20 Australian women artists and 43 Afghan women; literacy students at the Organisation of Promoting Afghan Women’s Capabilities (OPAWC) Vocational Centre in Kabul. The custom-printed handkerchiefs provide a vehicle for the voices of Afghan women to be heard through beautifully stitched imagery and Dari and Pashto text. The group of Australian artists demonstrate their commitment to using art as a means of connection, support and social transformation.

Making Marks is part of the 2020 Human Rights Arts and Film Festival.

“It is in vain to dream of a wildness distant from ourselves. There is none such.” Henry Thoreau

All gardens are artificial constructs. English gardens cultivated in Australia in part represent a nostalgia for a distant homeland, creating traditional picturesque spaces that involve taming bush landscapes. Australian explorers and settlers witnessed Indigenous farming and gardening techniques, however dismissed this embedded knowledge as it did not serve a colonial agenda.

The possibilities of what constitutes a garden, and what it might culturally represent are explored in the exhibition Garden. In reassessing plant-human relations, to develop chlorophilia, a love for plants, we might pause to foster deeper connections with plants and each other whilst cultivating care.

Garden is part of the 2020 Human Rights Arts and Film Festival.

Objects can reveal a lot about human nature; an inclination to make, possess, consume, covet, touch, use or fetishise. Object Lessons presents the work of eight artists who utilise objects within their practice that in a broad sense consider objects as cultural artefacts and in so doing prompt further questions about our own assignations and perceptions of significance, authenticity and value. With a set of seemingly disparate works that draw on histories, designs and materiality, Object Lessons invites us not just to look, but to consider our relationship to, and complicity, with objects.

CONFLUENCE brings together three artists exploring human relationships with water; from the devastating, unbalanced and in-crisis, to the flowing and harmonious. Their work responds to water’s fluid, archetypal, natural and ritual qualities: from the mythic, photographic and sculptural works of Jeremy Blincoe that evidence the dying rivers, lakes and landscape of the Murray-Darling, to the fluidity and movement of Emmy Mavroidis’ bronze sculptures embodying the shared watery nature of all living beings.

Adding another stream, Claire Bridge explores concepts of inter-being and confluences of humanity, technology and ecology through her video work, ritual vocal performance, and sculptural installation teeming with life on the edge of an era of climate change and the 6th Mass Extinction. CONFLUENCE streams future possibilities for ongoing-ness, weaving together rivulets of opportunities to converse, transform and harmonise our relationships with water and each other.
